DR. BROWN IS AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT

Is Connected with Robbery of the Werner Warehouse

MRS. BROWN ESCAPES

Antioch stepped into the police limelight for the second "big case" within a week. No sooner had the mysterious killing of Attorney Hauschild at Lake Marie became cooled, when the police authorities stepped out and took into custody Dr. Spencer Brown of Ida avenue of this village, and placed him under arrest, charging him with being the master mind of the robbery of $1,250,000 worth of bonds and valuables from the Werner Warehouse in Chicago. The safe of the warehouse was opened by burning the door off with an acetylene torch.

Mr. Brown left Antioch on the 14th train on Saturday and was arrested Saturday evening at his laboratory in the 1600 block on North Wells street. Efforts to take Mrs. Brown into custody on Sunday proved futile. Mrs. Brown left the home on Sunday afternoon, carrying a suit case and a small dog. She was seen by several people walking up and down the Soo Line tracks near Hickory road, as if waiting for an automobile. She has not been seen nor heard from since.

Mr. Brown has lived a life of mystery since coming to Antioch several years ago, when he bought the little bungalow on Ida avenue. The Browns are only seen at lengthy intervals and no one seems to know anything of their business or social life. They also maintain a cottage at the lake and an apartment in Chicago, besides Dr. Brown's laboratories on Wells street. Dr. Brown caused much comment in Antioch about a year ago when he was connected with a gigantic forgery case. He has been under police surveillance for the past ten years, but the police, although positive he was connected with several of the city's biggest crimes, have never been able to find evidence enough to convict. Chief Hughes of Chicago says that he has "the goods" on him in this case, claiming he was caught with $24,500 worth of packing house bonds that comprised part of the Werner loot.

First a stolen bond appeared at a bank. It had been left there by a Frederick Fain, who said he got it from Attorney Julian Ryer.

Ryer said he got it legitimately from George Blackford, a salesman; Blackford said he got it from Thor Wassburg; Wassburg said it came to him from Graham S. McGill, a dealer in securities, and McGill said, after some persuasion, that he got it from Dr. Spencer Brown.

That, however, was not quite enough for the police. They went to McGill's partner, Herbert Hannah, who said he had seen Brown pass the bonds to McGill. And Brown, when confronted with their stories, said to each of them:

"You're just a liar."

Brown, in his physical appearance and manner of life, suggests a character from Dickens with his astonishingly shrewd eyes. The flat he lives in is in a district of drab rooming houses; its walls are crumbling, the plaster loose, the paper stained, and the furnishings represent an errant taste—rugs from China, statuary from Persia, a statue of St. Joseph, one of the poet Goethe, one of the Virgin Mary. The assortment of books runs from Kipling to Freud, from medical treatises to volumes of sentimental verse. Chairs are of teak, cabinet of mahogany inlaid with pearl, and—a flare of the ultra-modern—there is a $3,000 player piano!

Also it is queer about the locks. While it requires six keys to open the door leading from the corridor into the living room, there is another door on the same corridor leading into the dining room which could be opened with a hairpin. But on the door there is an electric device which at the merest touch on the knob rings a bell in the bedroom.

Police, in raiding the place, ignored the two corridor doors and smashed the back one, which had been nailed shut.

H. S. Seniors to Present "Charm School"

Last year the only entertainment given by the high school pupils was "In the Garden of the Shah." This was a great hit with the public and the community now has faith in the students as actors and actresses.

This year's senior class is preparing to present the "Charm School" on December 3. The "Charm School" is a three act comedy which proved very popular on the stage; and at present there are several companies touring both England and North America playing it.

Wallace Reid played the part of the principal of the "Charm School" in the movies. When an actor of his caliber selects to play the title role in this play, that should be a good recommendation for it.

With all the features, as special scenery, pretty girls, electric storm, handsome pros, operatic features, a real buggy ride on the road at midnight; and a score of other features, this show can't help but be one of the greatest successes of the season at the high school.

GRAYSLAKE WOMAN IS BURNED TO DEATH

Mrs. Emily Strong, widow of Thomas Strong of Grayslake, suffocated Monday night in a fire that broke out in her home while she slept. She was charred on the arms and face. Her body would have been completely cremated only for heroic work on the part of Grayslake firemen. Members of the department risked their lives to recover the body. She was dead when carried out of the house.

Mrs. Strong lived alone in one-story house located near the Soo Line railroad depot in Grayslake since the death of her husband a year ago. The fire was believed to have been caused by an overheated stove, which was in the room next to the bedroom occupied by the woman.

The blaze was discovered at midnight by P. E. Keon, an operator employed at the Soo Line. He chanced to look out a window and saw the home in a mass of flames. He summoned the Grayslake fire fighters, but the fire was raging fiercely when they arrived, apparently having broken out quite a time before being discovered by the night operator.

Upon arriving on the scene three of the firemen gained entrance to the woman's bedroom by smashing a window. After being carried out measures to revive her were employed but with no success.

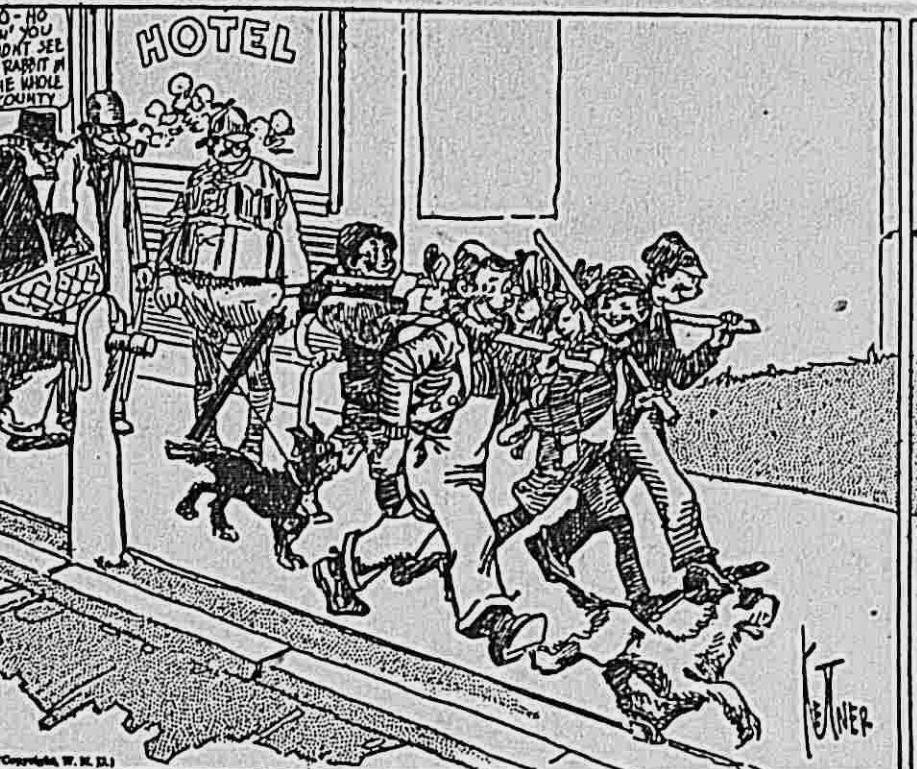

The home, a frame structure, was burned nearly to the ground.

Mrs. Strong was about 60 years old and was well known in and around Grayslake. She lived in the village limits for the past 12 years and in the vicinity for nearly 20 years. The late Thomas Strong was foreman on the Judge Upton farm, south of Waukegan for years.

For the Advertisers

The Antioch News has installed a new advertising service, whereby the merchants of Antioch will be able to obtain the latest features in the way of display advertisements. This service gives the readers illustrations of the season's up-to-the-minute fashions and furnishings, and will greatly improve the appearance of the ads as well as the appearance of the paper. This service also includes cartoons, comics, news features, etc., giving our readers a more interesting and neater paper. This vast outlay of photos, comics, advertisements and news features are mailed each week, thus assuring nothing but latest features.

Big Events in the Lives of Little Men

Mrs. Lieber to Speak at Open Meeting of Club

The Woman's Club will hold an open meeting Thursday evening, Nov. 22, at 7 p. m. in Woodman hall.

To this meeting all club husbands are invited. In addition, each member of the club is privileged to invite two or more friends as guests of the club for that evening's program.

The program committee has been fortunate in being able to secure as a speaker for the occasion Mrs. M. H. Lieber of Winnetka, Ill., state chairman of the department of applied education, I. F. W. C.

Mrs. Lieber will address the club and its guests upon the subject of "Taxes and Where They Go." She is a live wire, a forceful and entertaining speaker, who thoroughly knows her subject, and has the ability to keep her audience in a gale of laughter, let her subject be what it may. Those who have heard Mrs. Lieber will need no second invitation. For those who have not, a rich treat is in store.

The Woman's club takes great pleasure in extending to all interested citizens of the community a cordial invitation to be present and hear Mrs. Lieber's address upon a subject generally supposed to be too deep for a woman's brain.

To the personal invitation given by club members—a general invitation is extended by the board of managers to any and all who would be interested to become guests of the club Thursday evening (this evening), Nov. 22, at 7 p. m., in Woodman hall.

The early hour is made necessary by the train schedules. Mrs. Lieber must leave on the 8:40, so come early.

At Monday's meeting Mrs. Darby gave a very interesting report of the district meeting held at the Rogers Park Woman's Club on Nov. 13. Mrs. Palmer of Springfield, the new state president, and Judge Max Pam of Chicago were the principal speakers. Mrs. Palmer laid particular stress on "loyalty" and "cooperation," loyalty to your individual club and cooperation with the hundred thousand women who are members of the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs.

The following books have been purchased by members of the reading circle: "Visions of Desire," "White Flag," "The Able McLaughlin," "A Son at the Front," "Feet of Clay," "Black Oxen" and "Never the Twain Shall Meet."

AUCTION SALE AT SALEM ON WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28

There will be an auction sale on the farm located two miles north and one mile east of the Salem station on the Plank road, on Wednesday, November 28. Fifteen head of livestock and about fifty Rhode Island red pullets will be placed on sales together with much farm machinery and hay and feed. The machinery is practically all new. DOLL AND GUN CONTEST WINNERS GET PRIZES

The prizes given each week for the children at Reeves' Drug store started last Saturday, when the names of Dorothy Hucke and Clayton Bartlett were drawn. Dorothy received a walking and talking doll and Clayton an air rifle. The next drawing will be on Saturday, Nov. 24.

Kinrade-Snyder Wedding Is Pretty Affair

On Wednesday morning at 9:00 o'clock a very pretty church wedding took place when Miss Ruth Kinrade of Antioch became the bride of Warren Snyder of Area. The ceremony was performed at S. Ignatius Episcopal church by Fr. Flower.

Mrs. Harold Wells, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Mr. Harold Wells accompanied Mr. Snyder. The bride wore a charming gown of orchid silk crepe and carried white roses, and the maid of honor wore a beautiful gown of blue silk velvet and carried deep pink roses.

The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kinrade of Antioch and has a host of friends who are attending congratulations. Immediately after the wedding ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was held at the bride's home, to which about 75 guests attended. After the reception the happy couple left on a short honeymoon trip to Indiana to visit friends of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder will make their future home in Ivanhoe.

Mrs. Lieber will address the club and its guests upon the subject of "Taxes and Where They Go." She is a live wire, a forceful and entertaining speaker, who thoroughly knows her subject, and has the ability to keep her audience in a gale of laughter, let her subject be what it may. Last Thursday evening the home of Attorney Hauschild was robbed and nothing was taken but valuable papers and business records belonging to the attorney. Other articles of value, including jewels, etc., were not taken. This fact strengthens the police story that he was murdered for the safety of the crooks. The inquest was continued until Dec. 5th to allow the police to gather more details on the "accidental shooting."

MISS CLARA DROM WEDS FLOYD HORTON

Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock at the Methodist parsonage occurred the marriage of Miss Clara Drom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Drom of North Main street, to Floyd Horton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horton of Lake Villa, the Rev. E. Lester Stanton officiating.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Grace Drom, and the groom by his brother, Louis Horton. After the ceremony they went to the groom's home, where supper was served. The young couple left shortly after for their new home in Waukegan, where they will be at home to their many friends at 914 Ash street after December 1.

The accident occurred about 11 o'clock. In the car with Miss Hucke were several other young people. They were traveling south on Main street when a car, driven by Mrs. Clayton Wertz, turned at the Maple avenue corner. Miss Hucke says she slowed up a bit, thinking the Wertz car would leave passing room while turning, but the latter car pulled to the center of the road and stopped, and there was only a choice of either hitting the Wertz car or making a quick swerve.

Miss Hucke chose the latter and as the pavement was wet from an all-evening rainfall, the car skidded and overturned. Miss Hucke received several severe bruises and was under the doctor's care until Tuesday. The car, an Overland, was smashed considerably. The other occupants of the car were badly shaken up.

Of Interest to Antioch Farmers

Timely topics and local news concerning stockmen, poultrymen, gardeners and dairymen. Edited by C. L. KUTIL

A LIVE MEETING HELD

A large number of Antioch farmers with their wives and children turned out last Friday night to see the motion pictures on cattle tuberculosis and other farm subjects. County advisor Mr. Doerschuk of Libertyville showed the pictures which included two reels on cooperative marketing, two reels on cattle tuberculosis, and one reel of comedy. Mr. Minto of Antioch, secretary of the Lake County Farm Bureau presided at the program. Previous to the motion picture program, Lester Nelson, president of Antioch High School Agricultural Club, spoke on "The Agricultural Club and what it hopes to accomplish." C. L. Kull discussed Bovine Tuberculosis rather thoroughly previous to the pictures. A novel scheme in the way of a guessing contest gave life to the program.

NOT SO BAD

Dr. D. C. Grimmel, Lake County veterinarian, reports to this column that up to November 10th, he had tested 1005 head of cattle for tuberculosis and found 219 reactors. He states that if the work continues this way, Lake county wont have as many tubercular cattle as had been expected. Dr. Grimmel began work on the 9th of October, and we must say that he is progressing wonderfully. Many herds are now on the waiting list, waiting to be tested. Dr. Grimmel has tested several herds in Antioch, and will be in this vicinity again about the first of December. Let the good work go on.

FARMER'S WEEK

January 21st, to 26th, 1924, has been set as Farmer's Week at the Illinois College of Agriculture, Urbana. Here is a place where every wide awake farmer can go and gain inspiration in his work. Agricultural men of wide fame are to be on the program to discuss live farm subjects. For those who are planning to attend, there will be a more complete program for the week, given in a later issue.

THE INTERNATIONAL

In Chicago within reach of every Lake county farmer, is to be held the International Livestock and Grain Exposition, December 1st to the 8th. This is the greatest agricultural exhibition of its kind in the world. There is nothing to lose and all to gain in a trip to such an exposition. If we but gain the realization of the immensity of the agricultural industry that will be sufficient. Many Antioch people are planning on attending for at least a few days.

FARM BUREAU NEWSInteresting Radio Programs Are Scheduled

The regular Tuesday evening Farm Bureau radio programs from Station KYW, Chicago, at 8:01 p. m., are as follows for the next three weeks:

November 27—"Cooperative Marketing of Wheat," by Walton Petet, Marketing director, American Farm Bureau. "Farm Film" by D. O. Thompson, president, Homestead Films Co., Inc.

December 4—"The Farm Problem an International Problem" by C. T. Crofton, Manager of Savanna Produce Station. "Farm Bureau Service to a Community" by J. W. Coverdale, secretary, American Farm Bureau.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, which arranges for these programs, reports that letters from farmers in all parts of the United States indicate that thousands are "tuning in" on the farm programs from station KYW.

The Lake County Farm Bureau has received notification that the Illinois Agricultural Association offers a reward of $100 on the first conviction in each county for violation of state or national law regulation, prohibiting the importation of tuberculosis cattle into Illinois.

Numerous reports coming to the I. A. A. clearly indicate that many tuberculosis cattle are being smuggled into the state without regard for law. This is especially true on the northern border.

President Sam Thompson, of the I. A. A. in making announcement of the reward, stated that it is given on provision that the county farm bureau offer a similar amount, making a total of $200 for conviction of the first offender apprehended in each county. The reward will go into effect on November 15.

At a meeting in Chicago of the I. A. A. officials, farm advisors of Northern Illinois, and others interested, it was brought out that millions of dollars have been made by bootleggers of tuberculosis cattle, that they are powerful and unscrupulous, and are not going to give up willingly.

The I. A. A. asked that the appropriation of a million dollars be made by the state to indemnify farmers for tuberculosis cattle tested under state and federal supervision, and now it is up to the farmers to support our laws and regulations so that it will be spent to good advantage.

That it is a state-wide problem is indicated by the fact that the Board of Supervisors have appropriated money to clean tuberculosis out of herds in 41 counties.

Lake county dairymen are using greater care than ever in buying cows and demanding the 60 day test on cattle shipped into the state or bought from a dealer.

We are informed that several dealers are offering to sell cattle subject to the 60 day retest which is the only safe plan. The Farm Bureau is advising its members to buy cattle on this plan only. Wisconsin commonly recognized and proves that herds raised by owners are testing out with a much smaller number reactors than where men have made a practice of buying and selling without retest.

Dairymen of Lake county will not tolerate any shady or crooked work in importing cattle from Wisconsin or G. Johnson.

The Gates of Thanksgiving

(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

IT IS through the gates of thanksgiving we enter the courts of praise; Our thanks for the little bounties That compass us all our days Shall bring us to greater blessings And lead us to larger ways.

O, Lord of the manifold mercies, As we number them one by one, From the least of Thy loving kindness To the uttermost gift of Thy Son, Lead us on from our selfish gladness To the marvelous things Thou hast done.

—Frank Herbert Sweet.

IDON'T know that I have anything to be thankful for," complained the boarder in arrears as he sadly rattled a bunch of keys.

"What do you want to start anything like that for?" inquired the sarcastic boarder. "Don't you know that you will start us all figuring out things that we have to be thankful for when you make a remark like that, and it will be an awful bore?"

"There's one thing," announced the timid boarder in a still, small voice from away down at the obscure end of the table. "There's one thing," he repeated after clearing his throat.

"And what is it?" asked the polite boarder, recklessly.

"The thing for us to be thankful for at Thanksgiving is that it is so near Christmas."

"Oh, yes!" cried the pretty teacher, enthusiastically.

"Yes," continued the timid boarder, greatly encouraged, "so near Christmas and yet not too near."

"That gives us two things to be thankful for," commented the mathematical boarder, counting on his fingers. "First, that Thanksgiving is so near Christmas; second, that Thanksgiving is so far from Christmas."

"I'm thankful that it doesn't come near the Fourth of July," declared the fat and saucy boarder. "The arrangement of our holidays throughout the year is exactly right. We have one egg-eating holiday per annum—namely, Easter—which comes in the spring. We have one holiday devoted to the eating of fried chicken and ice cream—namely, the Fourth of July. The Thanksgiving holiday in the fall is sacred to turkey and pumpkin pie, and Christmas to plum pudding and mince pie."

"One festival sacred to new hats and flowers," burst out the poetic boarder, "one devoted to speeches, patriotism and picnics, one for family reunions, and one for the giving of presents."

"As I said before," resumed the timid boarder, "Thanksgiving is just the right distance from Christmas. We can say to ourselves: 'We can't get a turkey or a new suit of clothes or a new house or a new automobile this Thanksgiving, but Christmas will soon be here, and then we'll have everything! We'll have more money at Christmas time than we have now, and things will be easier generally.'

"So we can be thankful at Thanksgiving time that we are so near a good feed and the season when people are apt to come across, thus enabling us to loosen up and come across little ourselves maybe."

Which message of good cheer brightened up all the faces around the table, even causing the boarder in arrears to smile slightly.

Add Two Highways to State Trunk

Two Kenosha county roads are added to the state highway system by the report of the legislative committee which was made public at Madison on Monday. They are the Burlington road running from Kenosha to Burlington and the Bristol-Union Grove road running north and south from the Wilmot road to the village of Union Grove and north from this point to connect with a road leading into Milwaukee. In Racine county the roads from Racine-Corliss and from Fontana to Williams Bay is added to the system.

These roads mark the only additions made to the state highway system in the three southern counties in the state. Large additions are made to the road system in many of the northern counties of the state.

The Bristol road running north will be continued to connect with Highway 36 at the Milwaukee county line and will probably become a part of that highway.

Both of the Kenosha county roads added to the state system have been improved by county or town funds. The Burlington road running west from Kenosha on Division street, has long been a county trunk highway and it is improved with concrete as far west as its junction with Highway 57 leading into Milwaukee. Beyond this point the road is an excellent gravel road and it has always been considered one of the best highways in Kenosha county.

During the past summer a great deal of work has been done on the Bristol-Union Grove road and it is now in excellent condition.

It is expected that the state highway commission will at once proceed to the marking of these roads. There is no reason to expect that any large amount of money will be spent for the further improvement of the two roads during the coming year, but the improvement of them will be carried forward as it is reached by the state highway commission.

Announce New Service for Light Bulbs

In recognition of the growing demand on the part of its customers for a greater volume of illumination the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois will, effective November 19, make a notable reduction to its customers in the matter of lamp exchanges.

Under this plan the company will furnish to all new customers the original installation of such number of sixty watt lamps as the customer may desire and likewise replace burned out lamps to all existing customers taking the general lighting service with sixty watt size, free of charge.

At the same time the customer is afforded opportunity, if he so desires, in the interest of more adequate illumination, to get a larger lamp while those of smaller size than sixty watt will be furnished for installation and renewing purposes at a greatly reduced price.

Schedules showing the new prices are available at the company's office and exchange stations of the company throughout its territory.

The new policy governing incandescent lamps is the outcome of a problem that the company has been working on for some time and hence, it may be said, marks a new milestone in the history of its desire to render a most adequate service at the lowest practicable cost.

COOLIDGE ASKS NATION TO OBSERVE "GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY" ON DEC. 2

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTONNear East Relief,
121 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:-

It is with a good deal of satisfaction that I commend your proposal to observe an International Golden Rule Dinner Sunday, on the second of December, 1923. I feel sure that this suggestion will meet with very widespread approval and will bring more closely to mind the charitable requirements of those who are prosperous to those who are in adversity. It suggests not only a practical method for help, but the highest expression of sympathy by sharing for a time the privations of others.

Gordially yours,
Lamont Johnson

The Zero Milestone, located just behind the White House at Washington, on Meridian of Longitude Zero, dedicated to the Nation and accepted by President Harding, is the starting point for road measurement east, west, north, south of the Capitol of the Nation.

It is forty miles to Baltimore. It is also forty-five miles to Baltimore, depending on the part of Baltimore to which one measures! It may be two hundred and fifty-three or two hundred and sixty-seven miles to New York, according as one measures to the Battery or somewhere up above Harlem!

Every town in America ought to have a milestone, to which road distances from other towns could be measured, and from which distances could be computed. If an error of a mile was made in estimating distance between town and town, across continent, the motor traveler may likely be several hundred miles out his calculations!

One mile milestone costs little. It easily be financed by the local civic or commercial club. Its placement and use will foster civic pride,ourage tourist travel, and be an lasting convenience to all who it. A little research will compute exact distance from the Zero Milestone at Washington, still further adding to its interest.

From a commercial standpoint an official milestone would be of service giving readers of advertisements of real estate, for example, definite information. A farm may be advertised as being six miles distant from Antioch. With the adoption of an official milestone by Antioch, the reader could know that the distance is six miles from a fixed point in Antioch which would be in the heart of the village.

With the Hughes Family to Florida

St. Andrews, Fla., Nov. 11, 1924.

As we got out of the car at Nashville, Tenn., we realized that the prediction of a frost if it cleared, had proved true. The two young men who were in a tent just back of us said that they had to get out of their cots at 2 a.m. and wrestle with themselves to keep warm. It was their first trip south and they had failed to realize that the mountain country between freeze land and The Sunny South was just as subject to sudden changes from one temperature to another as it is farther north. It seemed to be the first trip for the most of our camp acquaintances, and they were learning something. One old lady said: "Yes, we are going south, but it seems foolish". Not so to me. From Nashville south the forest changes to more red cedar, and we saw many thousands of cedar posts, and sawed lumber piled by the R. R. or being drawn along the highways. $95 a thousand in the rough. I said to one man "This must be your best crop." He said it was. We ran thru Nolansville, Farmerton, Lewisburg and Fayetteville to Huntsville, Ala., a few miles below the Tennessee-Alabama state line. The slogan of this city is "The biggest little town on the earth." And it has one of the finest springs to be found anywhere. We soon got into camp on the city campground, where we found lights, water and toilets for the use of such nomads as ourselves. There were cars here from many of the northern states, and as we went to sleep it seemed as if we might think that we were really "down south." But in the morning after we had an early breakfast in comfort in the car, and got out, Jack Frost had got as far south as we and everything white and cold. But again the sun shone all day as we ran down the valley of the Tennessee river, often in sight of it, till we reached Guntersville, where we crossed on the ferry for a dollar. We had to wait for one load to cross over and come back for us, and enough more to fill it again. And right there we met up with Mr. A. P. Roden who told us he had 500 acres of land and everything else that he wanted. Had just marketed over $1000 worth of Keefer pears. His daughter had married a man from Indiana. A tourist who used to come thru, and knew a good thing when he saw it. They were at Umatilla, Fla., raising grape fruit and oranges. He was one of the D—d Yankees, who only care for the $$. Down there they were charging the tourists a $ just to stay on a little of their several hundred acres of land over night. "We took up here and like that, we are glad to help folks along, and give them anything they need free of charge. Now when you folks come back this way be sure and stop and make us a visit. My daughter was back here for the summer, and when she told me just how it was down there. I decided not to go there." "I have everything I need right here." And I want to say that he certainly has things pretty well in hand. Has property on each side of the river, and can catch a few more trout than any man he met. Says he is 65 years young and is going to live to a hundred. Why not? His mother lived to 95. "I'm bound to reach a hundred sure." When I told him that sometimes "The expectations of the wicked shall be cut off" He wouldn't listen me. And if we ever get back there we mean to "stop by." We ran on through Anniston and Oxford to Talladega, Ala., where we camped up on top of a wood covered knoll, that the city furnishes for such as we. Here we had but one other car for company. Man, wife and two daughters, and their car had a two wheel trailer with cots attached and tent over it. Very nice but too much to do. The frost did not reach to the top of the hill but we found plenty as we dropped into the valleys, and the wind was still pushing it down farther south. Had a fine road to Sylacauga but from there to Rockford it was rocky enough, as well as having some grading that was still muddy from the rain some days before. Thru Wetumpka, Montgomery, Troy and Brundage to a camping place ten miles beyond, where "we slept beside the sounding waterfall," where there is an artesian well supplying a swimming pool, and the water is warm enough to make the radiator that has been drained for fear of frost warm up the engine enough to start readily. It is the best camping place we have seen. Both sides of the road. Open or under fine shade. Plenty of seats and tables. Good entrances and exits. Sixteen dressing closets at the swimming pool. A dam that reminds me of the one at Wilmette, Ill. A grist and saw mill combined. Water enough going over the dam and thru the race to furnish power to light a big city. No, we did not think we needed a bath any way. Only on the road nine days. We didn't need it. The tank is filled from the well. Not the river, and there is a concrete bridge across that has nine arches at the sides about 20 feet each and a center span of about 100 feet. A noble bridge.

We reached St. Andrews, Fla., at 2:00 p. m. Saturday, Nov. 10. The tenth day from Gurnee, after laying over Sunday and at least as much more on account of rain. Four days of misty weather and four of the clearest days one ever sees and frost every morning of the bright ones. Getting here at 2:00 we had time to get in good shape for the night, and found our home in good shape under the careful hand of Mrs. W. W. Whitehurst. And we found Coley Hughes Whitehurst weighing 23 lbs., and looking as bright as all his relations combined. You see what a name can do for a child! What, We notice the growth of the young trees loaded, but the hungry hens have harvested the persimmons. This is the only place I have found, that I had to peel off clothes till I got down to my shirt. The sun sure gets in his work down here. St. Andrews Bay The Beautiful is just as lovely as ever. We had a visit from a friend, in Gurnee, Mrs. Anna Lamb, who was here a few years ago, and is now in California with her brother. She says "I have seen no water that looks as good as St. Andrews Bay." An want to be remembered to all friends there. Will tell you all more next time. We got here before any of the Lake County papers did, but we hope that they will soon tell us why we got the frosts that followed us down. You need just as much cover on your beds in Florida as elsewhere, but the sun keeps you warm day times. H. D. Hughes.

Colors Being Used in Evening Frocks

Orchid With Yellow Chic Novelty Feature Now in Forefront.

We do not think of practical values when we select the evening wardrobe, observes a fashion writer. That is why, perhaps, modistes are relegating their taffetas, satins and crepe knits to the rear of their shops and filling the windows with those elusive affairs which seem to be cloudy associations of ribbon, lace and the sheerest materials.

Bouffant effects add to this appearance. The opaque quality of ruffled material merely emphasizes the soft transparency of the single fold which forms the frock itself. We may combine our trimmings of ruffled ribbon, fluted lace, plaited self-material, or any of the numerous bits which designers have accomplished so cleverly this season. But we should keep in mind the fact that daintiness has its widest appeal in evening frocks.

Embroiled figures on a silk background are to be found among the collection of pretty frocks for the younger girl. Unusual color combinations have been achieved. One of the novelty effects, which is finding considerable popularity just now, is the use of orchid with yellow.

The yellow is used in an underplay of fine georgette and lace, while the orchid is placed in slender panels over the yellow foundation.

Lace has not stepped from the limelight, as we might have thought earlier. It was used in such abundance on the frocks for afternoon wear that we scarcely expected to see its popularity increase as the days advanced. Perhaps because the vogue for dyed lace came to the rescue, the vivid and unusual colorings in which the lace was offered gave the fad its new lease on life.

However, we are finding it made up into the most attractive dance frocks. Almond green lace, with an apricot georgette girdle, proves a fascinating combination. Melon pink, touched artfully with rosettes of old blue chiffon or gray, lighted with the iridescent silver, is being seen at the smart dances.

White stormed the sports world and was accepted. For the golf links, the country club or the shore we gave it first place. But we are rather surprised to see evidences of its popularity in the evening frocks when color is being used so widely.

An exquisite dance frock of white chiffon was the center of attraction in a room that fairly bloomed with the color effects of other gowns. Of particular simplicity were the lines of this white frock, showing infinite skirts of chiffon, each dropping its pointed hemline a little below the other.

Straight Lines, With Flare From Knee Down

This type of gown is popular for afternoon wear. It is constructed of black satin, relieved by a touch of brilliantly colored embroidery.

Long Shoulder Lines

Displayed in New Furs

In the fur fashions of the winter is reflected the tendency to exploit the same long shoulder line so apparent in costumes of other materials. Even when much material is used and there is perhaps a cleverly inserted godet plait in front or at the side, or when the attached piece at the bottom of coat or wrap is unmistakably circular, the effect is always of extreme slimness, an effect accentuated by the close little helmet or cloche hat which has been carried over from the modes of summer and still remains well in the lead of millinery fashions.

A Neat Closing.

A torn placket hole looks most untidy and can quite well be prevented in the following way: Sew a hook and eye at the very bottom of it on the wrong side, then hook it together and pinch the hook down tight. This keeps the placket hole quite neat, and it is almost impossible to tear it.

Three-Quarter Length Mandarin Style Coats

Generally speaking there is no more becoming fashion to the average woman than that of a coat of three-quarter length worn with a frock to match. Slender in line, a costume of this type is not only graceful and dignified, but extremely smart as well. For the woman of rather moderate dress allowance it is probably the most satisfactory choice she could make. It serves so many purposes and may be worn on both formal and informal occasions.

It is in a costume of this type that the Chinese influence is so pronounced. The lines of the coat, the cut of the sleeves and the details of trimming have been copied from a mandarin coat.

A new fashion that has appeared shows a suit which has a skirt of striped wool with a fur trimmed coat of plain color, or the order is reversed. These are what might be called semi-sports suits and are just the thing for early autumn days in the country or for a suit to wear in the morning when shopping.

The question of waistline still remains a matter of individual choice, since many of the best designs show a rather long waist while others place it a bit nearer the natural line. It is claimed, however, that the long line gives an appearance of youth and therefore is perhaps the more popular choice.

New and Unusual.

A coat which is a striking exponent of the new mode is in color a marvelous tone called Egyptian granite, somewhat like rosewood. It is trimmed with bands of beaver slightly separated so that one glimpses the color of the fabric. These bands are arranged to extend only across one side, leaving the other plain. The effect is new and unusual.

The following communication from Mr. J. K. Dering brings to light an evil that is causing considerable loss to farmers:

Antioch News,
Gentlemen:

I mailed you this morning two advertisements. I am very much disturbed over the absolutely lawless way in which people go through farms, such as our Cedar Crest Farms, and have reached the conclusion that we find trespassing there.

We have, as you know, a large number of valuable horses and cattle on our farms and many times during the last ten years we have lost different animals through somebody's carelessness with a gun. We have put up signs warning people not to trespass and we are continually telling people to please read the signs and leave the grounds unless they have permission to remain, but it doesn't seem to do any good at all.

This dog that was shot was a pet, not a bit savage or fierce and whoever shot him must have done it cold-bloodedly and with nothing but brutality in their heart.

I would very much prefer to allow people to go through our farms if they take pleasure in walking around looking at the horses and cattle and if they enjoy the woods, but it looks as though the actions of a few is going to the extreme. We had something like twenty-four or five turkeys running in the Crane Woods, which we rent, but twenty of them disappeared in twenty-four hours and then whoever took them had the nerve to come back and take the last four or five about a week later.

Very respectfully yours,
J. K. DERING.

Petty thievery of chickens and other farm animals has increased in this section of the country considerably the last year. It seems to be the work of an organized outfit.

Now that the holidays are coming on and a greater demand for poultry it will be well for everyone who has chickens and other poultry to watch his backyard.

While the thefts are small in any one poultry farm it does not take the thieves very long to make several visits and make a good cleanup.

Twenty-four turkeys were stolen early part of this week from the farm of Mr. Dyer at Millburn and complaints of loss of poultry are being made at the News Office in alarming numbers.

Publicity and constant watch will make it too hot for this kind of work to continue.

Science and the Miracles

E. Lester Stanton

(The fourth of a series of lessons on miracles, delivered at the M. E. church, Sunday night, Nov. 18.)

I announced the subject as "God and the Scientist," but upon further study, it seemed best to limit it to one part only of that great theme, as stated above.

There is a great deal of hard feeling on both sides, between those religious people who believe that the scientists are trying to destroy religion, and those scientists who believe that religious people are trying to throttle science. This attitude is to be blamed more to the religious people, it seems to me, than to the scientists, for the reason that from time immemorial religious people have more or less believed that religion was a sort of deposit, given once for all, that never ought to be changed. But science can, on the very face of it, never take such an attitude toward any thing. And religious people have more or less always persecuted those who have felt that every thing ought to be tested and tried, and pried into—for this is the spirit of science. It is partly a question of faith, but mostly a question of our God Concept. What kind of a God do you believe in? Do you believe in a Transcendent God—a God who having created the universe has gone off somewhere to watch the thing run? That is not a very complimentary idea of God, nor of man. A God who would treat his children that way, would not be much of a Father. But there are many people who still believe that God is that kind of a God—that He is only to be seen in the spectacular or the miraculous. That was the idea to some extent of the Hebrew children—Moses thought that God was nearer to him in the burning bush, than in some other place. And when ever some thing exceptional happened they thought God was acting in it, but they did not see Him every where. The world is full of people like that today—at the time of the San Francisco earth quake many people said that it was a judgment of God upon that sinful city. The scientist would ask, Why does not God destroy Chicago or some other city which is perhaps more sinful? And if he were a geologist he would say, you people are just treating God like a slight-of-hand performer you only worship as long as He performs tricks. Now we know that as long as there is life or the conditions of life on this particular planet there will be earth quakes and volcanic eruptions all around the Pacific basin, because the rock on the bottom of the Pacific is more dense than the rock on the main land all around, causing an unequal pressure all along the coast line where the heavier rock is pressing with force which will lead inevitably to faulting, where the bed rock of the ocean will slide down along the continental rock. This settling or faulting, as it is called, of such an incomprehensibly vast weight of rock will cause great disturbances, such as happened at San Francisco and lately in Japan, and is constantly happening in lesser degrees all around the Pacific basin. Before we knew this much Geology these things might have seemed like miracles, but now we see that they are but the natural working out of laws which God set to work when He made the universe.

I suppose that a scientist would be satisfied with the following definition of a miracle: A miracle is something which happens which is beyond our ability to understand. He would never admit that we shall never be able to understand it, but he would just say that at the present we are not able to understand it. For the true scientist is always hoping to know more, and never sets limits to what he hopes to know. He is just as devoted to God in this attitude too, for he feels that God who gave him a brain expects him to use it, and that if God did not want him to know things He would not have given him so many keys with which to open doors behind which lay so many great mysteries. Those religious people who oppose science just misunderstood the purpose and the spirit of scientists. They fail to realize that the scientists have given us all of our present control over our world. To the scientist we owe electricity, and steam, and control of disease, and industrial chemistry, and the comfort and safety of our hospitals, and our printing presses, and our knowledge of God, based on astronomy, and most of these men thru all the years who have slaved and sacrificed to learn about God's universe, for our benefit, have been lovers of God and lovers of their fellow-men.

If you would study the life work, with its privations, of Goodyear, who gave everything to find a process of making a useable rubber, you would take off your hat to men like him who have done so much for us, whom we have forgotten even to thank. "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing" but we have outlived that spirit of rationalism, which tried to do away with God, as soon as it began to learn about His universe. I have filed a list of the world's greatest scientists of this and of past ages who have been men of God. I said that our attitude toward this subject is largely one of our conception of God. The scientist thinks that God is an Immanent God—He is everywhere—He is in the commonplace as much as in the exceptional. He has not gone away. He is here. He is just as close to us as He was to the men of the past. He will speak to men today as much as He would speak to a Moses or an Amos or an Isaiah. I would not worship Him if He were not that kind of a God. I did come to the place where I had to change my idea about God, or lose my religion. It seemed so terrible for God to be as partial as the old view of Him made Him. I am happy now in the faith that God is here, and near and that He cares, and now I can see Him working in His universe, as He does, by mathematics, and by chemistry and by dynamics and physics, and all the rest of the sciences. And when a man discovers a new law, I know that he is only finding out what God knew always. And this is a scientific universe. We do not know what we shall know in the future, but we do believe that all the universe is intelligible—things happen not according to chance or whim, and we can expect God to act rationally, and intelligently.

In the Valley of a Thousand Smokes in Alaska, just a little way off from the Pacific basin, there are many volcanic craters always at work. The natives surely think that God or the gods are there in that mystery, but the scientist knows the natural origin and nature of them. This illustrates how people who lived in the pre-scientific ages must have thought of every exceptional happening. This does not preclude the possibility of God doing things we can not understand. We can not even hope to know it all. We are not demanding such a thing. A miracle to us will continue to be just the things God does according to law, which law we do know. This does not detract from God. It gives us a God who is near enough and good enough and wise enough and intelligent enough to be at the helm.

One worthy of our honor, One who compels our worship and our service. Science is leading us closer to the heart of God:

The little world of oiden days is gone, A thousand universes come to light; The eyes of science penetrates the night And brings good tidings of eternal dawn:

There is no night, they find, there is no death, But life begetting ever fuller life;

They look still deeper, and amid the strife They note pervading harmony. The breath Of morning sweeps the wastes of earth,

And we who talked of age become as gods,

Scanning the spheres, discoursing of the birth Of countless suns. No longer human clouds,

We stand alert and speak direct to Him Who hides no more behind dumb seraphim.

1924 License Plates Are Black and Yellow

The 1924 Illinois license plates are to have a black background with bright yellow figures.

Trucks, tractors and trailers will be licensed for 1924 under the new automobile license law as amended by the fifty-third general assembly, the secretary of state has announced at Springfield in mailing out applications for all motor vehicle licenses for the coming year.

The maximum license fee for trucks is raised to $150; commercial tractor license fees will be determined on the same basis as trucks, and trailers will be required to bear license plates, the fees for which will be determined, as with trucks, according to gross weight and carrying capacity.

Passenger cars will be licensed the same as in 1923. Heretofore commercial tractors have been charged a regular fee of $25.

The schedule of fees for truck licenses for 1924 is as follows: $12 for 5,000 pounds and less, including weight of vehicle and maximum load; $75 for 16,000 and more than 12,000 pounds; $100 for 20,000 pounds and more than 16,000 pounds and $150 for more than 20,000 pounds. Last year the maximum truck fee was $60.

"The action of the legislature in increasing truck license fees results from the unusually heavy loads which travel over the highways, resulting, of course, in an unusually heavy maintenance expenditure.

Every trailer will be required to pay for a motor vehicle license, to be determined by the following rate schedule: 2,000 pounds and less, including weight of trailer and maximum load, $6; 10,000 pounds and more than 2,000 pounds, including weight of trailer and maximum load, $25, and more than 10,000 pounds, including weight of trailer and maximum load, $50. Pleasure car trailers will be taxed similarly.

Tractors will be classed as motor trucks, whenever used for commercial purposes on the public roads. Agriculture tractors will be taxed.

While applications for 1924 license plates have already been mailed out, the plates will not be mailed until the last week in December.

"This is done to prevent many new motorists trying to 'skip' through the end of the year on 1924 licenses, instead, in cases where an automobile is purchased the last of the year, or applying for a 1923 license," said the secretary.

Passenger car license fees will remain the same as last year, being based on the following schedule:

Gasoline or steam cars, 25 h. p. or less, $8, 35 h. p. and more than 25, $12; 50 h. p. and more than 25, $20; more than 50 h. p. $25. Electric automobiles will be taxed $12.

The Custard Cup

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Living in a barn converted into a dwelling, Mrs. Penfield is known as the "Custard Cup," originally "Cloister Court." Her income is derived from laundry work, her chief patron being a Mrs. Winkler, who has a son whom she has never seen. Living with her are "Clink" and "Thad," homeless small boys whom she has adopted. They call her "Penzie." Thad tells Penzie a strange man was inquiring for her under her maiden name.

CHAPTER II.—A tenant, Mrs. Gussie Bosley, induces Penzie to take charge of a package, which she does with some misgivings.

CHAPTER III.—Searching a refuse dump for things which might be of value, Clink, worn at the gates, encounters a small girl, Little, who proves to be the widow of his master. He takes her to Penzie, and Little is adopted into the family.

CHAPTER IV

Uncle Jerry.

Many times Mrs. Penfield had speculated about the identity of the man who had been searching for her—who had even traced her to The Custard Cup and then failed to find her. Several days had passed since Thad's report, and she had heard nothing further; neither had she the slightest clue, except that it must have been someone out of her girlhood, out of the past from which she had supposed herself cut off by the severing of all close ties. That past was filled with painful memories.

It was not an unmixed joy to know that a previous acquaintance might be near, and that at any moment she might be called upon to talk casually of those years which were buried deep in her heart. The very sound of her maiden name had stirred lethargic recollections into renewed life, into the power of shooting like darts of agony through the commonplaces of daily routine.

Inevitably, since imagination is a more vivid artist than reality, she had exaggerated the possibilities of the encounter, anticipating them with a dread which she was far from feeling when that encounter actually occurred. She even answered the ring of the bell with the serene conviction that a neighbor was calling.

"Good morning," she called brightly, as she rolled aside the big door.

A man stood on the warped board that took the place of front steps. He was about fifty years old, rugged, weather-beaten, giving the impression of out-of-doors and hard work, incessantly combined.

He said nothing. Hat in hand, he regarded Mrs. Penfield with a smile of inexplicable significance, which somehow checked the rest of her usual greeting—the part about coming right in. Her brown eyes blinked in question.

"Am I supposed to know you?" she inquired at last.

"I was hoping you'd guess me," he returned, in a deep voice that filled the narrow alley.

Mrs. Penfield shook her head.

"Then I'll tell you," he said, in evident disappointment. "I'm your Uncle Jerry."

"My Uncle Jerry! I didn't know I had one."

He laughed. "Wasn't James Winston your father?"

"Yes." Her eyes widened.

"I'm his youngest brother, John Jerome Winston."

Mrs. Penfield extended her hands. "Come right in. I didn't know I had a near relative in the world. I'm tickled to death."

Jerry Winston entered, walking slowly. As he sat down, he caught his hand against his side with a grimace of pain. "Tree fell on me," he explained presently. "Lumber camp in Oregon! It was my finish for that kind of life, but I was lucky to get off so easy."

They sat in silence for several moments, each absorbed in thoughts which the presence of the other had roused. It was the first time since his boyhood that Jerry Winston had been face to face with a member of his own family. He had cut himself off voluntarily, called by the free life of the western woods. Mrs. Penfield had never seen him before. During her childhood he had been mentioned only at rare intervals, and then with the reserve that hides all wanderers as behind a curtain of tacit criticism.

Jerry Winston cleared his throat. "It's mighty little I got to tell you 'bout myself," he began. "Lo!", it makes me lonesome to think of the life I've had to give up. Seems like I can smell the woods in my dreams. I could smell 'em when I was a youngster, and finally I couldn't stand it any longer. That's why I ran away. But that wasn't why I didn't keep in touch," he added quickly. "No, sir, that was 'cause the family didn't forgive me for not staying home and going into the store, as they'd planned. So naturally I—" He finished the sentence with a wave of his hand.

"And now you're living near here?" He hesitated. "Yes, a few blocks over," he replied vaguely. "I don't know whether I shall hang round or not. Depends!"

Her fine eyes grew deep with sympathy.

"So do I," sighed the girl. "We most had a quarrel over it. You see, some friends of the Bosleys are getting it up, and there was room for more, so Mr. Bosley invited—"

"Oh!" interrupted Mrs. Penfield, in a different tone. "Well, if I was in your place, I wouldn't think about it again. You know it's always a good idea for folks to stick to their own circle of friends, and I'll bet that was what Mr. Chase was thinking."

"Maybe," conceded Lorene; "but how I've wanted to go to Diablo with a jolly party! I expect I'll get over it," she laughed. "If you say I'd better help me to do it." She waved her hand and went on toward the Percy flat.

Mrs. Penfield turned back into the living-room; then stopped in the most profound amazement. Jerry Winston had risen and was still holding an attitude of listening, of thoughtful absorption. She tried in vain to recall anything in her light interchange with Lorene that could have had significance.

"What's the matter, Uncle Jerry?" she asked.

He shrugged his shoulders and became instantly the nonchalant, good-natured man of a few minutes before.

"Nothing, Carlene. I'm naturally kind o' interested in the little nest you live in."

"Wait till the children get here," she nodded proudly. "I'll bet you'll be intrusted then. They're dears, ev'ry one of 'em."

Little came in first and dashed to the sink. "I got somethin' now," she shrieked. "I'll bet it don't leak, neither."

There was a sound of running water. Then Little appeared in the doorway. In her right hand she swung an old agate teakettle.

"She's peach!" declared Little triumphantly. "She don't leak. Look at her!"

"O Little!" cried Mrs. Penfield. "Look yourself!"

The child's gaze followed the direction of Mrs. Penfield's finger. The water had percolated through the obstructions in the bottom of the teakettle and had found many holes for escape. The teakettle had become a sprinkling-pot, merrily spraying the floor.

"Jiminy!" exclaimed Little. "Ain't that the darndest luck?" With a flash of black curls, she made for the sink.

Jerry Winston's broad shoulders shook with laughter. "I can see she's going to be a comfort, Carlene. I'd stake my life she's got some go in her!"

"Land sakes!" laughed Mrs. Penfield. "I wouldn't give a last year's carrot for a feller that didn't have some spirit. It's a motor attachment; and if you want to see one that's in good working order, you just hang around and keep an eye on Little."

"I'm thinking of doing that very thing," said Uncle Jerry.

CHAPTER V

The Pink Sweater.

"My grateful goodness! I knew somethin' was up." Mrs. Wopple, who had struggled through the kitchen door, paused at the entrance to the living-room to emit this commentary on Mrs. Penfield, sewing by one of the windows in the midst of an unusual array of materials.

"Come right in," invited Mrs. Penfield, as cordially insistent as if Mrs. Wopple had not already done so.

"Wait till I move this nice comfortable chair into the sunshine for you. Ain't it lucky you came in just's the sun did!"

She moved the best chair into the narrow shaft of yellow radiance. If the sun were not mercifully aerobic in its possibilities, twisting its way into incredible intricacies of city architecture, it would never have penetrated into Mrs. Penfield's living-room at all; but by a marvelous astronomical provision, there was a precious hour in the afternoon when it struck her neighbor's white wall and was deflected, nearly full strength, through one of Mrs. Penfield's windows.

"I'll bet you're worrying 'bout my tendencies," he laughed. "That's what it is to get near a relative. Why, I've got such faith in Little."

He did not return his banter. Her brows twisted. "Of all the people in The Custard Cup—" she began absently.

"Downtown!" he mimicked. "Not in Sacramento."
